

GREENS BASIN - BIG COTTONWOOD CANYON

Rating: Easy Hike

Length: 2-3 hours (3.25 miles)

Gear: Standard Hiking Gear

Maps: MOUNT AIRE, UT

Rappels:

Water: None

Flash Flood Danger:

Season: Summer, Fall

Notes:

Waypoints:

Spruces Campground	12T 446151mE 4499309mN N40° 38' 34" W111° 38' 13"
Trailhead	12T 446003mE 4499103mN N40° 38' 28" W111° 38' 19"
Jct - Left	12T 446051mE 4498657mN N40° 38' 13" W111° 38' 17"
Private Trail - Stay Right	12T 446709mE 4498319mN N40° 38' 02" W111° 37' 49"
Greens Basin	12T 446938mE 4497890mN N40° 37' 49" W111° 37' 39"

Hype

The hike to Greens Basin lacks the big, dramatic views that many other hikes in Big Cottonwood have. The trek ends an unassuming basin, so there is no waterfall or lake destination. The lack of views and an exciting destination give this hike something that can be hard to find in Big Cottonwood Canyon, solitude!

Greens Basin is far more popular with snowshoers in the winter than with hikers in the summer. Often overlooked, it is a nice outing. The hike is relatively steep, but at just over 3 miles round trip, a relatively short outing. Plan your visit in mid-summer, and you are likely to be rewarded with a diverse wildflower bloom. As the trail ascends about 1,100 feet in its climb to Greens Basin, it passes through several different wildflower areas. Note, it is north facing, and after a big snow year, I was surprised to still find snow drifts in the basin in July!

Tags: hike, wildflowers, family friendly, access: paved

Trailhead

Big Cottonwood Canyon is on the east side of the Salt Lake City Valley. Get there by taking I-215 to the east, taking exit 6 off the interstate and heading east.

Follow 6200 South which becomes Wasatch Blvd for 1.8 miles to the stop light and signs for Big Cottonwood Canyon.

Turn left at the light and reset your odometer.

Drive up Big Cottonwood Canyon. The trailhead is at 9.7 miles, at the Spruces Campground on the right (south) side of the road.

Note: The trailhead is inside the Spruces Campground. It is usually busy and the parking full early in the day on weekends. You can stop at the pay booth and ask if parking is available, but I find it easier to park along the Big Cottonwood Road and walk into Spruces.

Route

Up Days Fork

From the road, enter Spruces Campground. Take the first right, and follow the one-way paved road to the first large group area. There is a large grassy ballfield area here and some benches. The Days Fork trail leave along the west side of the field and starts as an old jeep road. It is signed, but somewhat easy to miss.

Follow the Days Fork trail. The road passes water systems, then becomes a steep trail as it ascends a narrow chute. At the top of the chute, just after the trail levels out and becomes less steep, look for a narrow trail leaving on the left (east) side of the trail. It is well defined, but easy to walk by if not paying attention.

To Greens Basin

The trail heads northeast, switchbacks, and climbs steeply before switchbacking again and heading to the ridge. A few glimpses of the ridges and peaks that make up Big Cottonwood Canyon show through the trees, but sadly there are no good overlooks.

A side trail comes up from below and joins on the left. Stay right. This side trail goes down to private land below.

From the side trail, it is a short 10-15 minutes to Greens Basin proper. The basin is a small meadow surrounded by aspen and conifer trees. The trail fades at the end of the field.

Return the same way.

